ONLY TO SEE HIS FACE.

How a Lawyer Tempted Fate to Clear His Client.

One of the judges of the superior court is quite a wit.

Doubtless more than one of these distinguished gentlemen are witty as well as wise, but there is one judge in particular to whom the name of "wit" attaches closer than ever did counsel to rich client.

When this same judge was a hard-working barrister some years ago he was engaged as counsel for a fellow whose name was identified with much, if not all, that was bad in the neighborhood.

On the occasion referred to this individual was on trial for a violation of the "no license" laws of the town. Specifically he was charged with having sold to divers known and unknown persons whiskey from a bottle which he carried "in his inside pocket."

The evidence seemed conclusive. But the lawyer, loyal to the interests of his client and determined to save him if possible, in spite of his villainous, rum-soaked countenance, made a final appeal to the jury.

The appeal was not for mercy. It was for justice. It was as follows:

"Gentlemen of the jury, you have heard the evidence in this case against my client. I will not characterize it as perjured evidence. I will only ask you, gentlemen of the jury, to look upon my client's face, and say under your oaths and upon your consciences whether you can believe that if a man with that face had a pint of whisky he could be induced to sell it for any price."—Boston Herald.

GOING TOO FAR.

A Humorous Trip's Joconde Remarks and Their Result.

"Have you any cold victuals," inquired the rusty-looking pilgrim, "to spare for a hungry?"

"No," snapped the woman at the kitchen door.

"Perhaps I was wrong in asking for cold victuals," he rejoined, apologetically. "If I had suggested tenderloin steak with baked potatoes, madam, and a cup of cocoa—"

"You wouldn't have got that, either."

"H'm! My own preference, I acknowledge, would have been roast turkey with cranberry sauce, chicken salad, a morsel of Roquefort cheese, and French coffee, with, perhaps, a glass of—"

"It wouldn't have done you any good to ask for that, either, you impudent, insulting vagabond! You ought to go to work!"

"Madam," interposed the rusty tourist, with dignity, "I can overlook your total inability to satisfy the gastronomic requirements of a man with a somewhat fastidious appetite, but when you apply offensive epithets and offer unsolicited advice you are presuming altogether too far. Madam, good morning."

And as he got around the angle of the kitchen he could plainly hear the dipperful of hot water strike the wall of the house opposite with a horrible swish.—Chicago Tribune.

The Little One's Version.

A party of young people stopped playing whist long enough the other evening to hear a good story. "In my Sunday-school class," said a bright young woman, "is the sweetest little cherub you ever saw. She is much younger than the other members, but she insists upon remaining in my class. Some days ago I instructed each of the little ones to memorize a verse or sentence from the Bible. Knowing that the infant brain could not retain a long sentence, the mother of my youngest pupil gave the child the shortest in the good book: 'Jesus wept.' The following Sunday I called upon the class to fulfill my instructions. Finally I came to Margaret. 'What is yours, my dear?' I asked. 'Jesus k'ied,' she lisped."—Kansas City Times.

Where Was Moses?

"My son," said a Columbus father, "always make it a rule in keeping the appointments of this life, to start early and avoid the rush."

"Paw, that don't demonstrate."

"Ah, yes, my son."

"But I say no, paw!"

"What's your reason for so saying, my boy?"

"Sometimes a fellow's hidden in the rush."

"Never, if he is of any account, my boy."

"What was the matter with Moses?"

"Oh, well, go as you please; there's no such good fortune as losing you."—Columbus Dispatch.

The Jap It's Understood.

One of the Japanese students at Harvard had been taking some philosophy courses. The discussion turned upon spiritualism one day, and, though he seemed to be listening to the arguments understandingly, the professor did not feel sure that it was all intelligible to him. Accordingly, he asked if they knew about the subject in Japan and what a "medium" was.

"Mejum—mejum—ah, yes," was the reply. "Mejum—a sort of crazy person."

The professor and the class concluded that the Jap understood.—Boston Herald.

OUT OF PLACE.

The New Custom House Not Convenient for Those it is Supposed to Benefit.

An Insight into the Methods of Selecting a Site for the Convenience of the Public.

The custom house at San Pedro (Palominas) was established there some eight years ago, about nine miles south of the supposed division line, and, ere the time of the Ozo Negro mining enterprise, its revenues were hardly enough to pay the salaries of the officials, because of its bad location. Smugglers would go round about it and carry on a lucrative trade by way of the Sulphur Spring valley, San Jose mountains, Huachuca mountains, Mule mountains, and through the numerous passes leading from the United States into this portion of Sonora.

It was through the instrumentalities of the Mochtezuma Mining Co. that the custom house was abandoned and moved to Fronteras. It was' though, soon discovered that Fronteras was a bad location, because, situated some 50 miles south of the line and out of the free zone, importations of merchandise into it were so difficult, and connected with so much red tape and regulations, and the distances so far that such importations actually ceased by way of Fronteras, and were made via Nogales, which was about as bad.

Meanwhile, the new high tariff in force induced smugglers to redouble forces, and as the whole country between Fronteras and Nogales, some 150 miles, and that towards the Chihuahuas line was practically thrown open to clandestine entry, they were not slow in embracing the fine opportunities offered, and smuggling was carried on to such degree that the Nogales customs revenues actually came down to those of parties who can't afford to smuggle.

Another location nearer the line must be found, and such a place I had in my mind. In December last I took Messrs. F. A. Cañedo, the Collector, and R. Valdes, the Purser of the Palominas custom house, to this place to show them my spot, and arriving there they were perfectly amazed to find such a beautiful place, affording a view such as no other place on the whole line from Matamoros to San Diego can show.

I made a map, and Mr. Cañedo sent it to the Treasury Department, the result of which was that Mr. Juan Fenochio, Commander of the Gendarmerie fiscal of the 3rd Zona, with headquarters in Hermosillo, and Mr. Cañedo were sent, in March last, up to the line to find a favorable spot and get the figures in the United States for a frame building suitable for the new custom house.

Mr. Cañedo requested me to accompany him, so he, Mr. Fenochio and myself met at Bisbee, from whence we went to a place 6 miles south of Johnson's windmills and ranch right where the old road from San Pedro, that from Station 30 and that from Bisbee fork into one leading towards San Bernardino and through the old mesal ranch, some 6 miles further southeast towards Fronteras and from thence we went next day to my spot, north of the San Jose mts.

Arriving here, the Colonel admitted that it was a fine point—a strategic point such as the whole line had no finer one to show for a custom house site, handy and favorable to both government and people.

I explained to the Colonel the advantages of this point over any other.

Three miles distant in the mountains an everlasting supply of pure water can be piped to this site. The possibilities of orchards and grain fields, mining enterprises, and at a distance of 4 miles from the railroad were dwelt upon, but the Colonel did not favor the point, and pulled the strings toward the "Morita."

The "Morita" is Camou property, the San Jose's that of the Whitbeck L. & C. Co.; the "Morita" has no running water, is as destitute of wood as the Sahara, besides, it is far out of the way for everybody, and to make people who have interests in San Pedro, at Santa Cruz, at Ojo de Ayna, Janoverochi, upper Sonora River, Bacnachi, Arizpe, etc., present themselves there is forcing them to smuggle.

We have thus the following case: Custom house at San Pedro, bad; custom house at Fronteras, worse; custom house at La Morita, worst.

As I have seen letters written by Sonora governors to American mining men promising them assistance in reasonable things (and I am glad to state that such assistance came and materialized) will the acting governor of Sonora please kindly step forward and aid mining enterprise in the districts of Arizpe and Mochtezuma, in this that a custom house be established by the national government of Mexico in a point favorable to them and to the nation alike, right at the foot of the San Jose mountains, and about four miles south of a railroad station, and not in the "Morita," hidden away from view and from all natural roads into the district of Arizpe and that part of it the upper Sonora river entirely. The cost of piping water is so trifling that the government of Mexico can hardly refuse the small expense.
